Bramble Berry

This pretty and feminine sweater features bold cables and ribbing, which starts crossing over the yoke. This design was inspired by the wild berry patches near the woods on my home. The canes are more vertical as they come out of the ground, then they begin to arch gracefully over due to their length and weight. The birds love this area. The design is knit out of worsted weight wool in a color as ripe and juicy as a berry. But you can knit it in any color you choose. Finished chest circumference 40, 44, 48, 52, 56 inches.

Elizabeth I

This pattern has 3 lace scarves inspired by Elizabeth I, one of the greatest monarchs of England: Glorianna, Dainty Bess, and Town and Country. Dainty Bess was a pet name of the queen (for her red hair). The queen loved finery, and this design reflects her love of those things as well as her red hair. The stitch pattern is known as pendants. Dainty Bess is from another nickname of the queen. This particular stitch pattern was used in some of her silk stockings, the natural cream color a nod to her reputation as the virgin queen. Town and Country was knit with a Shetland stitch pattern that looks like the patchwork of fields in the country side. She was well loved by her subjects, her universal appeal reflected in this simple and elegant pattern. They are knit from 2/8 weight wool (or Shetland jumper weight wool).

Hickory Hollow

This men's design is for my grandfather, who was at one time a lumber jack in Wisconsin. He built a log cabin on Palestine lake and named it Hickory Hollow. The area is wooded and is spectacular in the fall. The stitch pattern mimics the shaggy bark and the nut of the Hickory tree. This design is knit out of worsted weight wool. Finished chest circumference 40, 44, 48, 52, 56 inches.

Through the Woods

1/10/2005

This cardigan was designed with a cabin in the woods in mind, and the meandering paths one finds in those places. The stitch pattern reflects the trunks of trees as well as the branches crossing over each other in the canopy. A perfect cabin in the woods cardigan when nights are chilly, this is knit out of worsted weight wool. Finished chest circumference 40, 44, 48, 52, 56 inches.

Flying Geese

This ladies vest was inspired by flocks of Canadian geese flying overhead in their deep "v" formations. It features a lace version of the stitch pattern at the bottom. Knit with worsted weight wool. Finished chest circumference is 38, 42, 46, 50, 52 inches.

Red Rocks

Inspired by Red Rocks Canyon in Colorado, this Aran is bold and sassy in a southwestern red. Stitch patterns were picked to reflect the unusual color and southwestern feel to the design. This design is knit with worsted weight wool, and is a unisex pullover. Finished chest circumference 40, 44, 48, 52, 56 inches.
